they have hoisted the flag of the Irish republic over the building.

Various corners in Sackville street have been occupied by the Sinn Feiners and wired barricades have been erected. In this street there has been a great deal of looting of shops and smashing of windows.

In St. Stephen's Green a detachment of the Sinn Feiners entered the green which is surrounded by a high railing and locked. The authorities considered that this move as a last stand might be intelligible, but as an outlet of the disturbance they could not guess its purpose.

The Countess Markievicz, the sister of an Irish baron, in a volunteer uniform, was a prominent figure in the disturbance. She was one of the leading sympathizers with James Larkin in the 1911 street car strike and her house was raided in January by the police who are said to have seized a printing press and type with which was found pro-German literature was being printed. Her husband is said to be a Polish nobleman.

In addition to St. Stephen's Green, various corner points covering the entrance to the Green also were occupied by the Sinn Feiners who flourished rifles from the windows of nearby houses. Several passing motor cars and taxicabs were commandeered. The occupants of these machines were taken inside the Green, apparently as hostages, and the cars were drawn up on the roadway as barricades.

There has been much rifle and revolver firing, seemingly at nothing in particular and several persons out holiday-making have been killed or injured. The wounded were removed to St. Vincent's hospital on one side of St. Stephen's Green.

In the Portabella road, over the canal which forms the boundary of the city, the Sinn Feiners seized a corner public house. Here also holiday-makers suffered from promiscuous shooting. One platoon of the Royal Irish Rifles succeeded in dislodging and taking prisoners these Sinn Feiners.

During Monday officers and men in khaki and also isolated individuals were shot at in the streets. Some of them are reported to have been killed or wounded.

No evening newspapers appeared in Dublin Monday and no morning papers were published today (Tuesday). The Evening Mail office was occupied by members of the Sinn Feiners yesterday. They still retain the possession of the building. The military have established themselves opposite the Evening Mail office.

The Royal College of Surgeons, which faces St. Stephen's Green on the west was seized by the Sinn Feiners and their flag flown from the building. Thus far the revolutionaries have captured nothing by fighting. There was nobody to resist them and they simply occupied unprotected buildings.

The authorities express the opinion that the trouble may last a day or two. They say there is ample force at the disposal of the government to quell the entire disturbance with ease. The sympathy of the people generally they declare is against the disturbers, but thus far the military authorities have not shown their strength. They are, no doubt anxious to end the trouble with a minimum of bloodshed and destruction.

It is impossible as yet to ascertain or even approximate the number of persons killed or injured but there is no doubt that the aggregate is considerable as the holiday crowds were large and the shooting by the Sinn Feiners was very wild and reckless.

bore the stamp of the postal censor and was unexpurgated.

The Dublin view of the uprising at the end of the first day seemingly corroborated the report that the force which began the disorder was not a large one.

Brought Up to Date

LONDON, April 29, 1:27 a. m.—The military operations for the suppression of the rebellion in Dublin are proceeding satisfactorily, says a communication issued by Field Marshal French commanding the Home forces, late tonight.

"What may be described as the organized forces of the rebels," the communication adds, "are confined to a few localities, the principal one being the Sackville street district in which the rebel headquarters appear to be the general postoffice."

The cordons of troops around this district has been drawn closer and the rebels in this locality are now confined behind their line of barricades. Sniping from houses in which small parties of the rebels have established themselves in various parts of the city is continuous. The district where this is most prevalent is that northwest of the four courts, which are still in the possession of the rebels. The clearance of these snipers is a matter of time. Considerable damage was caused by fire on the 27th and a large fire is still burning in Sackville street."

"In other parts of Ireland the principal points of disturbance are in county Clare at Ennis. Disturbances also are reported at Killarney, in county Kerry, Clonmel, county Tipperary. The other parts of Ireland appear normal. The general trend of the reports received indicates that the disturbances are local in character."

Public Mucin to Learn

LONDON, April 29, 10:25 p. m.—For all the British public is permitted to know, the flag of the Irish rebels is still floating over the Dublin general postoffice which was captured Monday by the Sinn Feiners, out for what was innocently supposed by the Dublin populace to be a mere Easter Monday route march.

Not much has been received from Dublin by any newspapers, and although confidence is felt that the authorities have the situation in hand and have ample resources to deal with it, nothing appeared in the London newspapers today to add to what was known yesterday concerning the trouble in Dublin.

It is reported from Belfast that the postoffice has been recaptured but the report has not yet been confirmed by any other quarter. From Belfast also comes the official report issued at Dublin Castle Wednesday, stating that Liberty Hall was captured after being shelled by a gun boat on the River Liffey, and that the situation was well in hand in other parts of the city.

A graphic account from the Associated Press correspondent at Dublin on the condition of affairs Tuesday shows the revolt paralyzed the whole business life of the city but it could not be dignified by the name of a "rising" although serious enough, and far beyond the dimensions of a riot. The correspondent describes the firing of the trenches, the erection of barricades, the looting and the wild and reckless firing by the Sinn Feiners by which it is feared the casualty list will be heavy owing to the large holiday crowds in the streets.

The Irish papers print long dispatches and show the strongest interest in reports from America that Germans and Irish-Americans are involved in the revolt and that German money and influence is behind the movement. They also publish extracts from American newspapers.

Capture of Rebels

BULLETIN, KINGSTON, Ire. April 28 (via London).—Four hundred Irish rebels were made prisoners when the troops captured St. Stephen's Green and drove them out with bombs.

As Seen by an Eye Witness

LONDON, April 29, 1:25 a. m.—The following graphic description of the revolt in Dublin was given by an eye witness who reached England from Dublin last night.

"The first incident of the outbreak was a sudden firing of musketry in St. Stephen's Green about midday Monday, which startled the populace. The streets speedily filled with people rushing out to see what had happened."

"Soon more shots were heard on Sackville street. Soldiers and members of the Royal Irish constabulary were being fired at from windows and houses. Much glass was being broken by the shots."

"Rebels inside the postoffice took possession of it and allowed their comrades to march in. There was no military or civil guard to overcome them. Most of the employees of the postoffice were turned out of the building, girls and men, at the point of the bayonet. In some cases revolvers were held at their heads."

"Several persons were killed or wounded. Two mounted constables were shot dead. Sackville street became the chief center of activity."

"It was not until late that the crowd began to dwindle. The first soldiers and members of the police sought shelter wherever they could when they saw the Sinn Feiners, several hundred strong, marching about the town."

"Having cut the telegraph and telephone wires, the rebels posted in windows and on roofs, constantly fired on the soldiers and police. Inside the postoffice building barricades of tables and desks were thrown up. None of the employees seem to have offered resistance. The republic flag was hoisted soon after noon."

"In the St. Stephen's Green neighborhood the rebels seized a number of houses. Many shots were fired at the Shelbourne hotel. Many soldiers and policemen in the crowds were picked off. The rebels wore ordinary civilian clothes and carried old-fashioned rifles."

"All traffic was stopped. Some times drivers were fired at without first being told to halt."

"The rebels took possession of all the public houses near the Green over one of which they hoisted the republican flag. Soon after this incident the firing became very indiscriminate and many more civilians were wounded."

"The rebels also took possession of a public house near Porto Bello barracks and constantly fired from it. This stronghold afterward was captured by the military with the aid of a machine gun."

"Throughout Monday afternoon and night, firing was heard in different parts of the city. In the outskirts, however, there was no trouble whatever."

"An attempt was made on Dublin castle but the guards defeated the mob after considerable fighting."

"At the railway stations trains were stopped the tracks were torn up and the employees were dispersed."

"In Cotton Green, St. Stephen's Green and Sackville street, street cars and other vehicles were commandeered and used as barricades."

"Throughout the greater part of Monday afternoon most of the city was in the hands of the rebels. In considerable portions of the city, however, there was no fighting. Perfect calm prevailed. The moving picture shows were open as usual and the people were allowed to pass through the streets as in ordinary times."

"Early Tuesday troops began to arrive and a concentrated movement was begun to eject the rebels from the positions they had taken. The plans of the authorities were obviously to surround them, and with this aim, the troops were hurried to strategic points. Fire was opened upon the Sinn Feiners who were in strong force in Sackville and Dame streets. Military snipers upon the roofs of the cottages and sheltered by chimneys fired continuously at the rebels approaching the college. One rebel was shot dead immediately in front of the building and his body was taken inside."

"On Tuesday the rebels in the trenches on St. Stephen's Green were barricaded with a great collection of automobiles, other vehicles and paraphernalia of all sorts. A little boy who was peering through the railing here was shot by a rebel sniper. During the day ambulances made many visits to the hospitals, carrying in injured."

"Just before lunch time Tuesday a big body of rebels sallied from the postoffice and marched to the Green-hall hotel to commandeer the provisions. They returned safely to the postoffice with supplies of meat, flour, bread and vegetables."

"In the evening the authorities, determined to drive the rebels from a shop at Kelly Corner, where there had been much sniping, trained a machine gun on the building and its front was quickly smashed in. A number of prisoners were taken here."

"The situation was taken more strongly in hand by the military early on Wednesday. Nobody was allowed to stand in the streets, and concerted measures were taken against Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the Sinn Feiners. A plain green flag floated over the building. Two small guns were brought up and fire was opened upon the hostile headquarters. Forty shells were fired in five minutes."

"The first shot carried off the flag, and little was left of the building when the firing stopped. Most of the rebels managed to escape by back exits."
